Summer Quest is a reading program that encourages children to read during non-school months. Summer Quest uses music, storytelling, magic and puppetry to show how entertaining reading can be. Activity guides offer a way to chart the students' reading success and make him or her eligible to win prizes.

Holla' Back @ DCPL keeps teens reading during the summer. The program is designed around this age group to motivate young adults to both explore books and write about what they read. Exciting workshops, performances and prizes are also part of the program.

The District of Columbia Public Library is proud to bring Summer Quest and Holla'Back @ DCPL to your community. Check the library locations below to find a Summer Quest or Holla' Back program near you.
